

Fair Fighting

Fight by mutual consent: Don't insist on a fight at a time when one of you can't handle this type of strain. A good fight demands two ready participants. It is best not to have a fight or intense discussion when one or both individuals are tired or have other commitments.

Resist making threats during or immediately after the argument.

Avoid blanket labels: Judging words and name calling is never allowed.

Stick to the subject: Limit this fight to this subject only. Don't throw every other problem into it; take them at a different time. Approach the issues with a problem-solving attitude.

Don't interrupt; stay on the same eye level: No one should interrupt and both should be on equal level. One person should not tower above the other.

Avoid words like 'never' or 'always'..

Stick to the present: Don't dredge up past mistakes and faults about which no one can do anything.

Don't argue in the dark.

Don't leave the argument: Don't walk away or leave the argument without the permission of the other person.

Don't point fingers: It makes the recipient feel like you are lecturing and it is an "over-the-other" position.

Take responsibility for change.

Take responsibility for your feelings. Rather than saying, "You make me so..." try, "I am angry" instead. Say what you feel about specific behaviors (ex. "I feel hurt when you say disrespectful things to me).

Avoid over-dramatization of problems. This makes decisions life and death issues; whereas the reality is that very few decisions revolve around your existence or non-existence.

Each person has the right to take time to collect their thoughts.

Don't hit below the belt: In your lives together you discover each other's sensitive areas. Don't throw them at each other.

Don't be critical and attacking. When the other person has no recourse to run away or retaliate, there will be no solution

Be honest. Yes, it hurts. Check out assumptions. Don't assume that just because someone loves you, they understand you or what you want.

Don't quit. Work it out: Bring the fight to a mutual conclusion. Otherwise, it will just recur again and again.

Don't try to win, EVER: If one wins, the other loses and begins to build resentment about this relationship. That destroys rather than builds the relationship. You can both win – or you both inevitably lose.

Respect crying: it is a valid response to how you may feel, but don't let crying sidetrack you. It is a response for men as well as women.

No violence, EVER: Physical violence and threats violate all the rules for fighting by mutual consent.

Remember a fight between partners has the purpose of clearing the air and expressing deep feelings in order to build a more unified life. Keep your goal in mind – the goal of sharing your lives with each other.

Words you should not say in a fight:

- “You never”
- “You always”
- “When you will ever learn”
- “I told you so”
- “I don't want to discuss it”
- “How many times do I have to tell you?”

Words you may say in a fight:

- “I'm sorry”
- “Please help me”
- “Thank you”
- “I need you”
- I did wrong”
- “I love you”
- “My bad”
